DiscoverEd

DiscoverEd is the name we give to the library catalogue at The University of Edinburgh. It doesn’t just tell you about the book and journal titles that we have though. It has got information about theses and conference proceedings and other types of material, all the different resources the library has bought for use in teaching and research here at the University and it tells you about them no matter what their format. So if they are in print or online or if they are musical scores or DVDs or online videos, for example.

Discovered you can get to directly at:

http://discovered.ed.ac.uk

Also from the library homepage and there is a library section in MyEd under “Studies”. So if you are in MyEd and go to Studies there is a Library section and one of the links there is called “Search and access library resources”. If you choose that one, it will take you to a channel and you will see a link there to DiscoverEd and/or a searchable box there for DiscoverEd.

And the “Library homepage” link on this Studies section of MyEd in the Library column there, that will take you to the library homepage.

These are all ways of getting into DiscoverEd and we will see how to use it in the next slides.
