Hello everybody. My name is Rowena Stewart. I am one of the Academic Support Librarians at the University of Edinburgh. There is an Academic Support Librarian assigned to each School and we are here to support the staff and students of that School get the most out of the University Library’s services and resources and we are also one of the points of contact if you have any questions about The Library. Particularly if you would like any help with literature reviews or for finding particular readings you think should be around but maybe are not.

We are also, I am, certainly, happy to take suggestions of material The Library does not have but which you think it should have.

The sets of slides I have put together are an introduction to The Library, its resources and services. I’ve put them into sets so there are a few sets of them, it’s not just one set of slides with the narration.

The first set are an introduction to the current status, as far as we have it, of the services The Library is operating at the moment but more importantly, where to go to find out what the latest is on that. There is also a slide about the Click and Collect service which is running at the time of these slides being put together [1stSep20] and possibly will be up to mid-September as well…NB. The Click and Collect service ceased on 11th September and the slide has been removed from this set.
